For Agents

Do I have to buy the waiver of liability or pay for the damage deposit?

Yes. Guests must pay for the damage deposit, or the waiver of liability insurance. In the past, every guest had to pay the damage deposit, whether or not they purchased the waiver of liability.

What is the difference between the Damage Deposit and Waiver of Liability?

The damage deposit is charged upon arrival and held for damages. If no damages occur, the deposit is refunded. If damages occur charges are withheld from the deposit, and if applicable charged to the card if the deposit does not cover all damages.

The waiver of liability covers all damages to the boat. The customer pays the daily fee, and should any damages occur nothing is charged to the customer.

What is not covered by the Waiver of Liability?

Damages to vessels other than the covered LPRM vessel, personal injury or loss, damage or loss of property/cargo of the contract holder and their party.

What incidents commonly result in damage charges?

Hitting rocks or running aground are the most common causes of damage. With low lake levels, the risk of running aground is higher.
